Being Apolitical is a luxury for those who aren't affected by the corruption of politicians and the powerful

If politicians will advocate for policies that harm your loved ones or seek for them to be deported, quite frankly, to be Apolitical is cowardice.

I feel like we are being purposefully naive here - again, the reason why we have the rights we do today (which I am sure we have pride in) is because the great men and women of history fought for them - they didn't abdicate responsibility to shape society for the better. Just because things may be better today, doesn't mean they are perfect, and it doesn't mean there are things that don't need to be changed. Such an Apolitical attitude simply facilitates the ignorance and neglect of the worst possible crimes imaginable.

I am not saying that everybody has to be an activist or politician, obviously people have different needs and priorities, and society will not be run by just activists. To each their own. Also don't let it take over your mental health and make you depressed. Yet that doesn't mean we should be politically ignorant.
